

Introduction: Why I chose
 I chose to study this subject because I have always been interested in the history of the world and how it has changed over time. I want to learn more about the different cultures and societies that have shaped our world today.

What I will be studying: The course
 The course will cover the history of the world from ancient times to the present day. It will focus on the major events, figures, and movements that have shaped the world. I will be studying the history of the world from a global perspective, looking at the interactions between different cultures and societies.

The course will be divided into several modules, each focusing on a different period of history. The first module will cover the ancient world, from the rise of the first civilizations to the fall of the Roman Empire. The second module will cover the medieval period, from the fall of the Roman Empire to the rise of the modern nation-state. The third module will cover the early modern period, from the Renaissance to the French Revolution. The fourth module will cover the 19th century, from the Industrial Revolution to the end of the century. The fifth module will cover the 20th century, from the First World War to the present day.

The course will be taught through a combination of lectures, seminars, and practical work. Lectures will provide an overview of the period and the key events and figures. Seminars will allow students to discuss the material in more detail and to explore different interpretations of the events. Practical work will include reading primary sources, writing essays, and participating in group projects.

The course will be assessed through a combination of essays, exams, and a final project. Essays will be written on a range of topics related to the course. Exams will be held at the end of each module. The final project will be a research paper on a topic of the student's choice, related to the course.
